THE PORTAGE & WESTBOURNE R.R.

It will be seen by the following extract from the Winnipeg Times of Nov. 13th that Sir Hugh Allan has completed the purchase of the Portage, Westbourne and North-western Railroad, and that it is intended to complete that line through to

Prince Albert by next fall. Yesterday afternoon the contract was signed on behalf of Sir Hugh Allan and the directors of the Portage, Westbourne and North-western Railroad, whereby the latter is transferred to the Allan system. It is now contemplated to push ahead the work as rapidly as possible, and it is intended to complete it by next fall.

The direction of the line west of Minto does not yet seem definitely settled.

One proposal is to run the line northward from Minto to Shoal Lake, thence nearly following the course of the trail to the crossing of the Assiniboine river, thence westward about midway between Fort Qu'Appelle and the Touchwood Hills, and thence north westerly to Prince Albert. The other proposition is to proceed westerly from Minto to the junction of the Assiniboine and Qu'Appelle rivers, thence westerly till the corner of the other proposed line is reached, north of Qu'Appelle, and thence to Prince Albert. It is very probable that the latter route will be adopted, as it is contemplated to ultimately extend the line to the Peace river district, and that could be done easily by taking a direct course from the point mentioned

north of Fort Qu'Appelle to Battleford, and thence to Edmonton and Peace river.

The new company have obtained right privileges over the C.P.R. from Portage to Winnipeg, and this city will be virtually the eastern terminus of the road. An engine and several cars for the road arrived here yesterday, and will be forwarded at once.

TURKLE FIRES.

By last mail we received papers from

Halifax, Nova Scotia, containing the particulars of a fearful fire which took place in that city on Nov. 11, which completely destroyed the Poor House in which there were some 100 inmates, of whom, and to relate, thirty-one of the sick and infirm perished in the flames. The fire originated in the basement near the elevator, and at first was supposed to have been subdued by the employees of the building, but it was only smothering for a brief time with rebuffed violence. In the meantime much valuable time was lost, both in sounding an alarm and in warning the inmates to escape and removing the bedridden. It appears that the hospital ward was in the very top of this high building (5 stories) and no way of escape, except by the staircase. There were no

OUR DELEGATES.

Advises were received by last mail

from Col. Spratt and Laurence Clarke,

Esq., the delegates who went east a few weeks ago, to consummate the agreement with the South Saskatchewan Railway

Company for the construction of a rail road from Qu'Appelle Valley to Prince

Albert. They expected to have met Mr.

McInnes, the President of the Company, and Mr. Fuller, one of the directors, at Winnipeg, but failing to do so, they were obliged to go on to Hamilton, where they would meet the Board of Directors and make final arrangements with the Company for the commencement of the work in the spring. The delegates are expected back in a week or ten days, when we have no doubt they will be able to report that satisfactory arrangements have been made for the prosecution of this work, of so much importance to the welfare of

Prince Albert and the whole North West

Territory. We clip the following from the Winnipeg Weekly Sun, of Dec. 12th ult., which comes to us in enlarged and improved form: "An eight page, forty-eight column paper, very well executed mechanically, and filled with excellent and vigorously written editorials on the lead-

THE PRINCE ALBERT TIMES.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1882

DISALLOWANCE.

Late Manitoba papers are filled with articles, more or less violent, on the subject of the disallowance by the Dominion Government of the Railway Charters passed by the Manitoba Legislature at its last session. Some of these even hint at secession and rebellion, independence or annexation, but these expressions no doubt have been hastily used in the heat of the discussion of an exciting subject. One thing is certain that public opinion is aroused to the highest pitch, and is unanimous on the part of both Conservatives and Reformers, in the determination to resist the invasion of Provincial rights and to maintain the independence of the local Legislatures. What intensifies the feeling just now is the fact that the Legislature has been dissolved, and a general election is probably even now going on. The leaders of neither political party venture to justify the recent action of the Dominion Government, but the address of the present Premier, Mr. Norquay is not so pronounced on this point as it might be. The last straw was the disallowance of the Emerson and North Western Railway charter. This has raised the popular feeling to fever heat, and at an indignation meeting held in Emerson lately, some pretty strong language was used and a delegation was appointed to proceed to Ottawa to remonstrate against the action of the Government. Mr. Norquay, it appears in his speech at that place, some time ago, pledged himself to re-enact that, and the other disallowed railroad charters, but there does not seem to be much advantage to be gained by that, as they will be only be vetoed again. The proper constitutional course seems to be to bring the matter before the Imperial Government, and get it to bring pressure to bear upon the Dominion Government, so as to prevent the exercise of the arbitrary use of the power of disallowance which they are now attempting. One thing is certain that in view of the fact, that we in the North West Territories may hereafter be placed in a similar position, it is our bounden duty to give to our Manitoban brethren, our hearty support and co-operation, in every constitutional and legitimate way, in their endeavor to preserve their provincial rights and independence. We cut the following from the Winnipeg Star, as an indication of the state of popular feeling on this subject, in the Prairie Province:—

"Some of our Ontario exchanges are halting the excitement in the North West about disallowance, by applying to it such terms as 'A Fuss.' 'A fuss,' as we understand it, is 'much ado about nothing,' or a great stir about something trivial. At their distance from us, ignorant of our circumstances, and having but little idea in regard to the actual development of things in this part of the world, these contemporaries fail to measure the magnitude of the interests at stake in the present crisis. We do not know how to enlighten them, except by inviting them to come here and study the question for themselves, which they are not likely to do.

"Meanwhile, they are taking the most unwise course possible by invoking the whole power of the Dominion to quell this 'fuss.' Now, we beg to tell them that the 'fuss' cannot be quelled in the way they are proposing to do it. Any pretence of forcible measures, and it can at best be but pretence, will only make matters worse. We have already stated, time and again, that there is as yet no display of rebellion, and no disposition toward either independence or annexation on the part of the people. Individuals here and there may have dropped a hasty word in these directions, but the heart of the people is sound and true to our present Dominion relationships. But if anything can shake the feeling and awaken the other, it is the tone of menace and parade of authority which are being adopted in certain quarters. We stand on our rights. That is all. If those to whom we refer would have the kindness to investigate the true state of the case, possibly they would come to see that serious wrong has been done us, and then, instead of proposing enforcement of the wrong in some impracticable way, there is possibility of its occurring to them that the best mode of quieting the 'fuss' would be to repair the wrong."

THE MAIL SERVICE.

We were much disappointed that no word was received by the last mail as to the immediate prospect of a weekly mail being established between Prince Albert and Qu'Appelle which we were led to believe was an accomplished fact. In the first issue of our paper we published letters from Jas. Turner, Esq., and Hon. D. McInnes of Hamilton, who had interested themselves in the matter, stating that we could depend upon getting a weekly mail shortly, and in fact Mr. McInnes stated positively that one of the Ministers had informed him that a contract had been entered into at a yearly cost of over $50,000. Nothing could be clearer than this, and we are at a loss to imagine where the hitch is. We understand that a letter was received by the Postmaster here, from the mail contractor at Qu'Appelle, stating that he had heard nothing of the proposed change, and did not believe that it was going to take place, at all events for some time to come. Now it is just as well for the Government and the Post Office authorities at Ottawa, to understand that the people of Prince Albert and the North West generally insist upon their right to have a weekly mail, and that too at once. They have been put off on one pretence or another long enough, and they will not stand it any longer. It is a crying shame that whilst other parts of the Dominion have their railroads, telegraphic communication, and daily mails, we in the North West Territories should be put off with a mail once in three weeks. It is not dealing fairly or justly with this important portion of the Dominion, and if the Government expect to retain the support and confidence of the people of these Territories, they must honorably fulfil their obligations and promises, both in regard to this matter and also in relation to those other grievances which we particularly specified in our last issue. It is not fair to the present contractor either, nor can it be expected that he can efficiently perform the service, or keep up to time with the accumulation of three weeks mail matter to forward. This last mail was three days behind hand and it will be worse before winter is over. We again (and trust for the last time) most strongly call the attention of the Post Master General to this important matter, and we trust to be able shortly to congratulate our readers upon the fact that a weekly mail has really been established, and in successful operation.

NORTH BRANCH.

The inside of St. Andrew's Church is being nicely painted for Christmas. The paint was given by the Rev. Canon Flett. The farmers are only now getting their threshing done. The crops are turning out splendidly.

At a meeting of Kinistino Lodge, U.D., A.F. & A.M., G.R.M., held in the Masonic Hall, Prince Albert, Dec. 1, 1882, the following officers were elected:—Bro. Rev. Canon Flett, W.M.; Bro. Thos. J. Agnew, S.W.; Bro. Henry Keenan, J.W.; Bro. A. E. Porter, Chaplain; Bro. Thos. E. Baker, Treasurer; Bro. J. F. Kennedy, Secretary; Bro. Wm. Dwyer, Tyler.

Advice were received by this last mail to the effect that a satisfactory arrangement had been effected by the directors of the South Saskatchewan Railway Company, with the Presbyterian Board of Mission at Ottawa, for the transfer of the unpaid mission lands to the trustees, on the same terms as already agreed upon by the other land proprietors of Prince Albert.

We understand that two mail bags were left behind this trip by the contractor, owing to being overloaded by the accumulation of mails. This is an additional argument for the immediate establishment of the weekly mail, but we doubt the right of the contractor to leave any portion of the regular mail until the next trip, no matter what the cost of transportation might be. Serious inconvenience and pecuniary loss might result from the delay in forwarding the mails at the proper time. The mail for the east which left yesterday morning was an extraordinarily heavy one, there being about 1,500 letters, of which 150 were registered, and about 600 papers. The Prince Albert Times is responsible for a portion of this, and contributes its due share of weight and importance to Her Majesty's mail bags from the North West, a large number of copies having been mailed to friends in the east by this trip.

CLAIM JUMPING.

The regulation which forbids a man from being absent from his homestead more than six months without leave of absence from the Minister of the Interior, has given rise to a good deal of claim jumping in this neighborhood of late. Some hardship may arise from the regulation in special cases, yet no doubt it is a just one, and framed in the interests of the country itself. It is scarcely fair that a man should get land for nothing, upon which he never intends to live, and which he never intends to improve. If he wants land he should by it as he would any other commodity. Yet the claim jumper is very often no better than the claim taker. If a claim may be taken for speculative purposes, so it also may be jumped for the same purposes. We would suggest that the regulations be amended that the party who contrives to get another's homestead entry cancelled, should as evidence of good faith, be allowed no leave of absence, but be compelled to reside upon his home, and from the date of entry.

THE LASH.

Punishment for the Attempted Outrage of a Child.

Halifax, Chief Justice McDonald delivered sentence to-day in the case of Andrew Doyle, convicted of attempting a criminal assault on a child under twelve years of age. The court room was crowded. The judge called on the prisoner to stand up and he briefly addressed him to the effect that the crime of which twelve of his fellow-countrymen had found him guilty, was one revolting to every feeling of our nature. He might say that in the verdict found by the jury he entirely concurred. It was now his duty to pronounce sentence upon him. He had been credibly informed that the prisoner's whole life had been that of an incorrigible man on whom public trial, fine and imprisonment had produced no effect. As he seemed callous to the vow of shame, and as the crime of which he had been convicted was so degrading a nature, he (the judge) would try if his feelings could be reached in another way, and happily a clause of the statute gave him power to do this. The sentence of the court was that the prisoner be taken to the place from whence he last came, viz., the county jail, and there be imprisoned for the period of one year, with hard labor, and receive twenty lashes on the bare back.—N. S. Citizen Nov. 18.

THE CANADIAN NORTH WEST.

At Ottawa, on May 15th, 1882, an order in Council was passed dividing the great North West Territory, beyond the confines of Manitoba, into four new districts, or more properly speaking, territories. The new names and locations are as follows:—Assiniboia, containing about 95,000 square miles, is bounded on the south by the international boundary, on the east by the western boundary of Manitoba, on the north by a line near 51° latitude, and on the west by a line drawn between 110° and 111° west longitude;—Saskatchewan, containing 114,000 square miles, is bounded on the south by Assiniboia, on the east by Lake Winnipeg and Nelson River, on the north by a line drawn near 55° latitude, and on the west by a continuation of the line making that boundary of the previous district;—Alberta, containing 100,000 square miles is bounded on the south by the international boundary, on the east by Assiniboia and Saskatchewan, on the west by British Columbia, and on the north by the continuation of the line bounding Saskatchewan;—Athabasca, containing about 122,000 square miles, is bounded on the south by Alberta, on the west by British Columbia, on the east by the line bounding Assiniboia, to the west until it intersects Athabasca River, then by it and Lake Athabasca, and following Peace Lake to a line near 60° latitude, which forms the northern boundary. To sum up the Saskatchewan district includes Battleford, Carleton and Prince Albert. Assiniboia includes Qu'Appelle. South Saskatchewan includes Forts Assiniboia and Qu'Appelle. Alberta includes the Battle, Bow and Belly Rivers, the cattle ranch district. Athabasca takes in the whole of the Peace River district. This division of the country hitherto known as the North-West and the Great Lone Land will have the effect of localizing points which hitherto were very indefinitely comprehended, and by having each its capital assigned, it will form nuclei for settlement more compact than the straggling, unconnected prairie squatters.

For stray animals from the British Museum, singing robins and wild geese, a special train can be sent for such as the Prince Albert takes the lion.

LIFE'S HIGHWAY.

(Written For The Times by K. E. H.)

On the highway of life I walked alone.
A simple, untaught child;
I plucked of the flowers that grew among its way-side grasses, tall and wild.
I gathered me up its blossoms bright,
From among the colors gay.
A garland of beautiful flowers I wove,
And laughingly crowned myself that day.
On the highway of life I walked alone,
A maiden young and free,
The lesson of life I had taken up,
But its poises proved a task to me;
It was most tempting lures I sought to learn,
But its lines were lines of care,
And its weight to carry I found—oh me!
Both heavy and hard to bear.

On the highway of life I walk alone;
Its flowers have faded and gone;
Tall, rank grasses are in my path,
Now filled with many a boulder stone.
The path is rugged, and I am tired,
My faltering feet go off astray.
My fading eyes close with early night,
And I find it hard to keep the way.
And the 'tis still the same, same road
I walked as a child so long ago,
Its ways are rugged, and lone, and wild,
But to me it is coming I know:
Its winding turns are now of grace,
The 'T've stumbled many a many a time,
Yet the hands of Him who led me forth
Still, still holds fast in mine.

Thou still my path lies up the steep
Of a mountain high, I dimly see Thy money sunnyside of the hill,
That in endless light grow wild for me
I still to the hand of Him will cling,
For the night is coming down,
He will guide me on my lonely path,
And I'll gather again as a child my crown.

PATRICIA KEMBALL.

A NOVEL.

By E. Lynn Eiston, author of "Illustration of Geography," "The True History of Joshua Davidson," etc.

MRS. JAMES.

She could not realize the fact that this body, this person of the one she had loved so tenderly and lived with so long was no more now than the stones in the fields, or the wood in the forest. She was intellectually conscious that he was dead, but she had still the feeling that he felt and saw and understood though he was not able to speak to her, and that she must take care of him against those who did not love him, she loved him. But indeed she had not much conscious thought of any kind. She had only a general sense of darkness and a dull kind of pain, mixed up with a mocking and incongruous activity of eyesight that seemed half sacrilegious, as when she found herself coming the worn buttons of his waistcoat and the stripes on his grey flannel shirt.

The doctor spoke to her, and tried to reason with her; but though she heard his voice clearly enough, she did not understand what he said. She wondered why he talked to her, and she wished he would leave off; but outwardly she was patient, and at one time he thought he was doing her good. Knowing his profession, he did not like that tearful, half-bewildered and half-stony look she had. If he had shrieked and sobbed, and been even petulant and unreasonable, he would have understood it better; but this silent tenacity had an ugly look of pressure, and he wanted to run her out of it.

Presently, in the midst of his talk, Gordon froze, pale and breathless, came rustling through the garden and up into the room where Patricia was standing, still keeping guard over the dead.

The news had met him as he came in from St. John's, and half a dozen people had stopped him in the village to repeat it.

"Patricia!" he said, touching her lightly on the shoulder.

His voice seemed to break the spell. She turned hastily and held out her hand.

"Oh, Gordon, how glad I am you have come; you are all I have left," she said. Look there, Gordon! Gordon! he is dead!"

Then she turned away her head, and covering her face with her hands broke down into passionate sobs and tears.

And the doctor, looking at her critically, gave a little sign of relief and said to himself, "Now she'll do."

"My darling! what can I do for you?" said Gordon, taking her into his arms with a strange mixture of tenderness, protection and shyness. "Patricia, don't give way like this; dear, you break my heart to see you!"

"He was so fond of you, Gordon!" said poor Patricia, looking up into his face. "How he loved you!"

"And how I loved him!" answered the young man, brushing his hand over his eyes. "We are one in our sorrow, dear! He was almost as much to me as he was to you!"

"Ah, you, you knew him, and he loved you," she repeated.

"And I love you too," he said in a deep voice.

"Yes, I know you do," she answered simply. "You are the only person in the world who does now—all I have left."

"And I will be always yours, always part of your very self, if you will have me, darling? We will never desert each other—never—never!"

"Never!" she said, tears breaking her voice; the poor young people transacting their love affairs so innocently before the doctor and in the presence of the dead!

But she did not let us think of ourselves; let us think of him," she said with a sudden remorse, turning towards the bed, where, flinging herself on her knees she took the cold hand again in hers and kissed it fervently as if asking pardon for her momentary disloyalty.

And Gordon was not ashamed to feel his own eyes dim and his eyelashes wet for sympathy and sorrow too. But he soon lifted her up again, and made her sit down while he stood by her, holding one of her hands in both of his; her other hand lightly on the dead. No more was said to disturb them. Quiet and silent they remained there, she gazing at the white face with its falling wreath of snowy hair before her, thinking only of him; he looking at the white face too, but thinking most of her and her desolate future. And in this silent companion ship of sorrow they felt drawn closer together somehow than if they had spoken for hours. They were unconscious of time, or who came and went about them. They were together in the presence of the man they both loved, and whose spirit seemed with them still.

So they would have stayed probably till found by the women, who had been sent to their mysterious death by women—came to fulfil the last offices, and the doctor gave Gordon a sign to take Patricia away. He thought there would be a difficulty and he had prepared his exhortations; but there was none of that feminine exaggeration of character in her which makes sorrowing women so often unmanageable. Besides, she felt that Gordon was her master now; that it was his duty to obey him as she had formerly obeyed her mother. When he said she was to go, she looked at him indignantly, mutely beseeching him for leave to stay; but when he repeated his words, drawing her as if to lift her from the chair, she went up at once, and though she wistfully addressed him with the simple obedience of a child.

Gordon kept with the poor desolate young thing the whole day through. But the long hours came to an end at last, and he was to leave her. He must be off early in the morning for Portsmouth, and neither pity nor sorrow, nor yet love, could make the time longer. They had talked but little through the day, but they had kept very near together. They seemed afraid of losing sight of each other; as if something would happen to separate them for ever if they drifted apart for a moment. There had been no pretence of reading, or of doing anything whatever with a purpose. They had either sat in the little sitting room, side by side on the black horse-hair sofa, or they had wandered out into the garden, scarcely noticing how gloomy the day was and how bright yesterday; but looking at each familiar tree and flower as people do who look for the last time. And they had stood by the model of the old Holland, and had touched it with a lingering fondness as if it had been a creature that could feel. But as they walked round it, both Gordon who had sense, and Patricia who was not fantastic, turned pale, and looked at each other with a sense of awe upon them, when they saw that, by some means not evident, the storm last night had broken on the figure-head of the resolute looking being that had symbolized the name, and the legend under moonlight, painted by his own hand. "Robert Kemball, R.N. Commander," had been torn away with the device. They made no remark to each other when they saw this. They only looked up, and both were very pale. It foreshadowed nothing, explained nothing; but it gave them a feeling of superstitious dread that made the present burden heavier.

The hours passed, as all hours do, and the last moment had come. Many a time during the day Miss Pritchard and old mother Jose had come down, wanting to be of use; and now the former, thinking that Patricia would be none the worse for at least the appearance of womanly countenance, was knitting a brown woollen antimacassar by the dim light of one kitchen candle, lamenting in her heart the selfishness of the young in Patricia's absorption in her grief for the one and her love for the other, and thinking it was a good thing, as matters had turned, that her sister Matilda had never married that old man. And yet, if she had, she would have had her position, and Patricia would have gone to her own relations. Yet Miss Pritchard was by no means a hard-hearted woman. She was only human, and she lived in a small place, with a very narrow field in which to work out her life.

"Well! time's up; I must go, Patricia," said Gordon.

He was pale and desperately agitated, Up to this moment he had been the calmer and more self-controlled of the two; now their positions were reversed, and it was he who had to be comforted.

"What's clock is it?" asked Patricia, waking up at it from a dream.

"Ten," said Miss Pritchard demurely.

"Yes, it's time for you to go," she answered. "Uncle knows the house shut up at ten."

"You'll write to me?" he said, standing and holding her hands in his. "You know you will probably have to move from here; you cannot stay here alone; so I shall not know where you are unless you tell me."

"You need not be afraid of my being left, Mr. Fergus. I will look after her till she gets a better protector," said Miss Pritchard in her precise voice.

TOWN NEWS.

Insurance in the Confederation Life Association.

The skating rink on the river will soon be ready for the skaters.

The Billiard and Pool Tables of T. O. Davis, arrived on Saturday; no more dull nights for the boys.

A few more police would be very acceptable at this point. At present we have only two and the Sergt.

Mr. D. A. McGregor has started a butcher shop in the brick store at the Mission. Boys give him a call.

Mr. T. E. Jackson has removed his drug store down to the Mission, where he can now be found in his new building.

We received a visit yesterday from Mr. Goodfellow, of Fort a la Corne, who with his family is in town visiting friends.

Santa Claus has arrived at Markley & Co's., where he has opened out a share of his wares. Call early and get your choice.

Gentlemen, leave your wives happy when you die by insuring in the Confederation Life Association. A. W. R. M'Kibbey, agent.

J. J. Fanning, the popular traveller for Jas. O'Brien & Co., wholesale clothiers of Montreal and Winnipeg, was in town this week, and did a good business.

The auction sale of lots in the Town of Kinsistino, which took place at the table House on Saturday evening was a great success. Over 100 lots were sold, at an average price of $25. Harry Keenan acted as auctioneer.

There will be no starvation next spring J. O. Davis & Co. have received a very heavy stock of general merchandise and have extended their business by opening a store at the South Branch. Mr. W. Fish left town today to take charge.

The following register was kindly furnished by George Duck, Esq., Dominion Land Agent:

As Mr. Samuel Donahoe, livery stable keeper, was taking a drive one day last week with a fast horse and a swell cutter, accompanied by a Gun (whether a breech loader or not we cannot say), the horse bolted and the Gun was suddenly discharged into a snow bank. Fortunately no evil consequences resulted from the explosion, and the Gun was quickly re-shotted and ready for any future emergency.

We understand that Mr. Fitz Cochran, barrister, has rented the whole of the second flat of the building formerly occupied by J. O. Davis & Co., now a little over Walter & Baker's new store, River street. It is now being fitted up for him, and will be ready for occupation in a few days. Mr. Cochran intends to have two rooms for his offices in the front of the building, in which two windows will be opened, and the remainder of the flat, which will be twenty-three feet long by twenty-five wide, capable of seating over one hundred persons, he intends to have fitted up for Penny readings, social gatherings, and meetings of various kinds. There will be a separate staircase and entrance from the west side. This will supply a much felt want in Prince Albert, and will accommodate the public at all events until a town hall is built. We understand that it is proposed to get up Penny readings during Christmas week, to be continued during the winter. Persons wishing to assist will please communicate with Mr. Cochran.

There is one clause of the memorial published in our issue of last week which we ascertain upon enquiry has been accepted by Settlers, previous to the 10th October, 1879, are entitled to purchase their pre-emptions at one dollar per acre, and instructions to this effect have been forwarded from Ottawa to the land agent here. This would indicate on the part of the Government an intention to confirm all settlers in their holdings who settled previously to 10th October, 1879, according to the terms of the Land Act then existing. In another paragraph of this issue we refer to the extension of the "jumping" which is going on in the settlement. No doubt much of this is practicable, and that many of the homestead entries hitherto made are nothing more or less than barefaced attempts to get land for nothing. We should exercise caution, however, as regards the "jumping" of claims taken up previously to the foregoing date, and which have been homesteaded upon and improved for the three years, and then sold by the occupier and abandoned. Our opinion is that upon investigation of such claims and sales, the Government will confirm all such transactions in their holdings, on the ground that the sellers though unable to come until lately, were yet entitled to their patents through occupation and improvement. We are willing at all times to acknowledge an act of justice on the part of the Dominion Government, and trust that this one is but the immediate forerunner of all the rest.
